Woodland resident targets local county supervisor for recall

By Steve Marschke

The son of a Yolo County supervisor has begun the process of a recall campaign against Tom Stallard, the supervisor who represents Woodland and West Sacramento's Bryte (northwest) neighborhood.

Frank Sieferman, Jr., a Woodland resident, has filed a notice of intent to recall Stallard, who was elected in 1994 and otherwise faces his next test at the ballot in June, 1998.

Sieferman's father, also named Frank Sieferman, represents a different Yolo County district and is thus not a direct political competitor of Stallard's.

Sieferman, Jr., reached at home Tuesday, said the recall was due to Stallard's unresponsiveness, and to the behind-closed-doors mentality of the board as a whole, except for his father.

"My reason, along with the 28 other signers (of the notice of intent to recall) was that we feel he does not listen to his constituents," said Sieferman. He may answer his phone and let you talk to him, but that's as far as it goes."

He said the board majority tends to come to board meetings with its mind made up, but declined to term the majority's actions as a violation of the state's open meeting law.

"I feel there's a movement behind closed doors that orchestrates what's going on," he said. Referring to one discussion on the gravel mining controversy currently facing the county, he added that "there was a script that had been prepared" before the meeting.

"They actually acted on one particular piece of legislation not even on the agenda, and totally suprised the fifth district supervisor (Sieferman, Sr.)."

He cited the board's handling of issues related to the county landfill, road maintenance and sewage matters as other bones of controversy.

Stallard said that he believes the recall effort is "totally unwarranted."

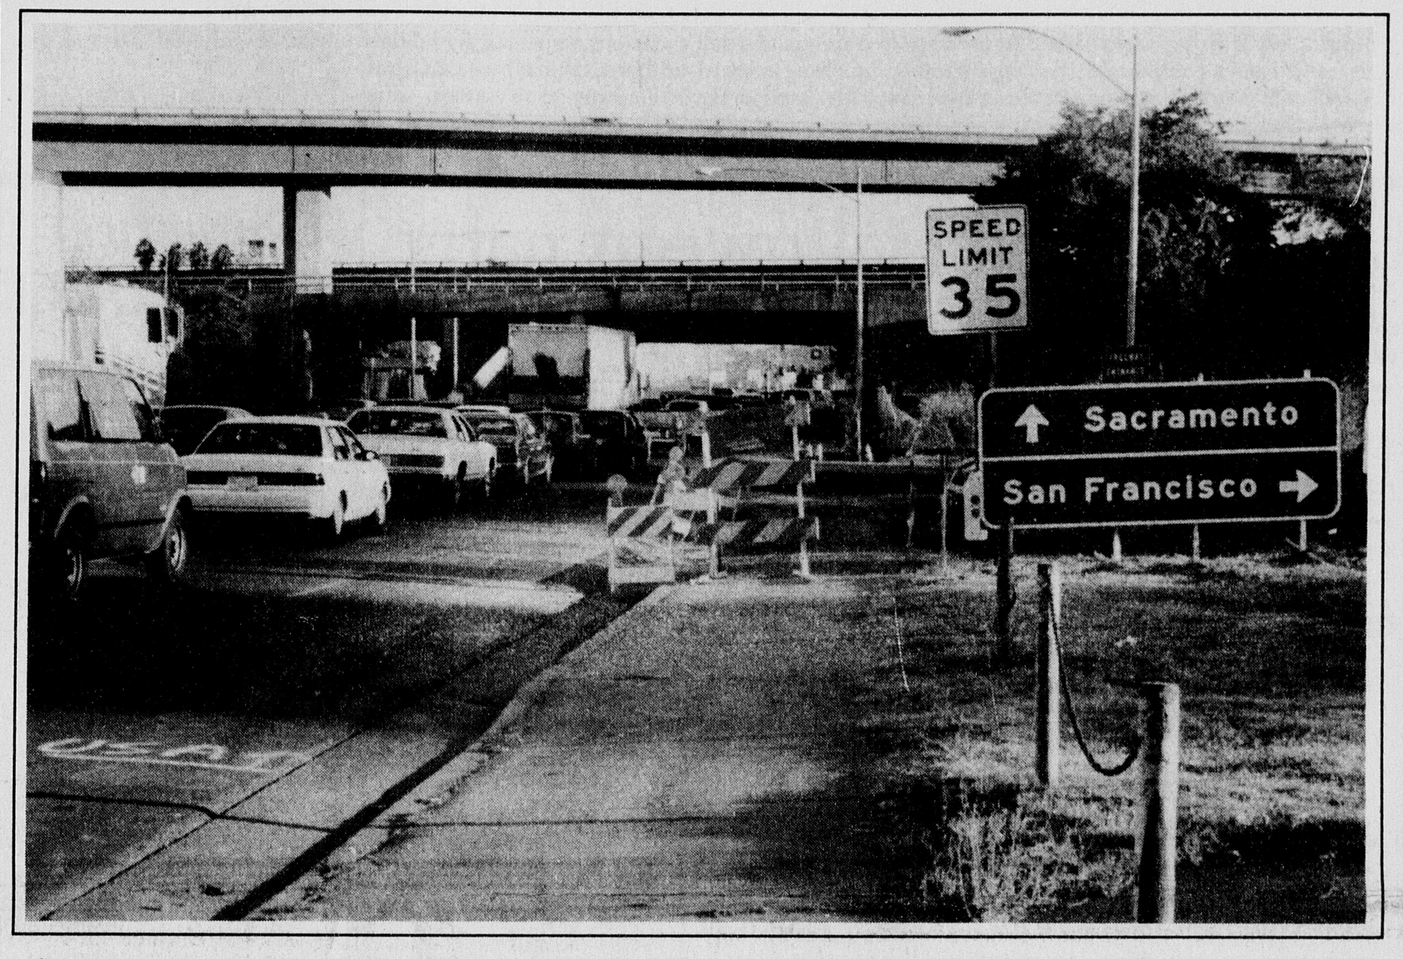

"I believe this recall is totally uncalled for," he said. "I've been responsible to my constituents, I've been accessible. . . and I've worked hard for the people of West Sacramento and Woodland."

Stallard added that he believes Sieferman has targetted him out of a general feeling of anger, but that "the gravel issues is one of the annoyances."

The board of supervisors, including Stallard, has taken a

Construction has begun on interim improvements to the Jefferson Blvd./freeway interchange, including changes to the lane structures for on and off ramps and to connections with Park Blvd.

In the meantime, expect a little extra traffic backup. As the signs say, the improvements, which are expected to ease traffic problems until a major Jefferson Blvd. overhaul four years away, are expected to be finished in May.

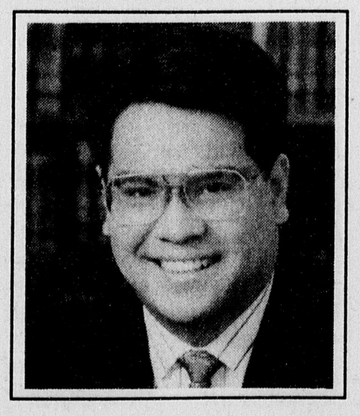

The project is primarily funded by state sources.

MEET THE CANDIDATES

The News-Ledger continues its chats with city council candidates

Mark Montemayor

■ Make West Sacramento a city of international commerce, says senior care administrator Mark Montemayor

MARK MONTEMAYOR

By Steve Marschke

"People think of international cities as big conglomerates like San Francisco, Los Angeles and Boston -- ports of call," said Mark Montemayor, a candidate for a four-year term on the West Sacramento City Council." But we have products here like rice, logs and wood chips, that go all over the world. Somebody has to promote the existence of our own port."

Montemayor believes this is one of the keys to the city's future. West Sacramento should take advantage of its "biggest business asset," the Port of Sacramento, he said.

"Instead of having ships unload at the Port of Oakland, which is swamped, why don't they come to our own Port of Sacramento, where there's no waiting? We have access to the freeway and the railroad system connecting Northern California."

Montemayor would favor having the city try to obtain more of a role in governing the port, whose district includes all of Sacramento County and only the eastern portion of Yolo.

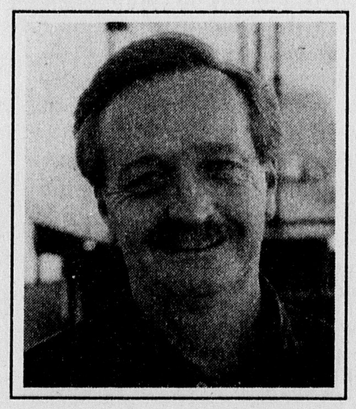

"An elected West Sacramento leader should go to Washington and make a case, saying the City of West Sacramento is home to the port, so why are we being dictated to by Sacramento, which has no distinct benefit from whether the port exists?," he asked.

Montemayor, who has travelled extensively, and served as a student intern to the United Nations while attending UC

Charles Moore

■ A long-time planning commission member, Moore hopes a successful campaign for the two-year city council seat will let him promote 'quality' planning and a business-like city government

CHARLES MOORE

By Steve Marschke

"The building of the Palamidessi Bridge is the most exciting thing happening in West Sacramento right now," said Charles Moore.

That judgment reflects Moore's enthusiasm for the kind of growth he hopes will occur not only in the port and Southport areas, which are dependent on that bridge, but for the city as a whole.

"I think this city is going to be unique unto itself," he said. "We are the hub of this region and it's important we draw on all these assets. It's important we draw all the best industries, all the best commercial. The council's primary focus is having quality in mind, whatever types of development we bring into the city.

"It's got to be something you would like to have next door to you."

Moore, 49, has a long involvement with planning in West Sacramento. He has been a member and sometimes chairman of the city's planning commission since it was first formed in 1987, a number of months after the city incorporated. He has been a proponent of many different kinds of development, including the industrial growth planned for the port and Southport Industrial Park, and was an activist against several local adult bookstores before they were fi-

Christopher Cabaldon

■ Back for a second shot at a West Sacramento City Council seat, Christopher Cabaldon has emphasized political reform as an issue

CHRISTOPHER CABALDON

By Steve Marschke

Christopher Cabaldon, a 30-year old legislative assistant who lives near River City High School, hopes to win the two-year term up for a vote next month on the West Sacramento City Council.

He doesn't have any major gripes with the current council, he states. He just thinks some fresh thinking is in order.

"I think they're doing a decent job and they deserve a lot of credit for the work they've done," Cabaldon said of the current city council. "I think their general approach has not been bad for West Sacramento. But I don't have the same group of friends and the same history as they do. That's helpful to get some fresh ideas and to get their juices flowing."

Referring to Mayor Greg Potnick and to fellow majority members Cindy Tuttle and Wes Beers, Cabaldon added that "they share a common view and a common filter. It's important to shake that up without going to the extreme."

Potnick appointed both Tuttle and Beers (separately) to the city planning commission before each earned a council seat.

Cabaldon cited the current controversy over the proposed widening of part of Jefferson Blvd. in Southport as an example of how the city could do a better job. After a series of hearings, residents whose property

The day Smoot took a political stand——

A few years ago, I was politically attuned to many of the significant issues, and whoa boy, I had an opinion. I was so charged up that, by golly, I was going to the extreme and demonstrate. . . demonstrate my passion for the political party of my choice, that is. You got it. I was going to be a radical. I was going to be gung-ho. I was going to vote my conscience.

I was going to get a yard sign.

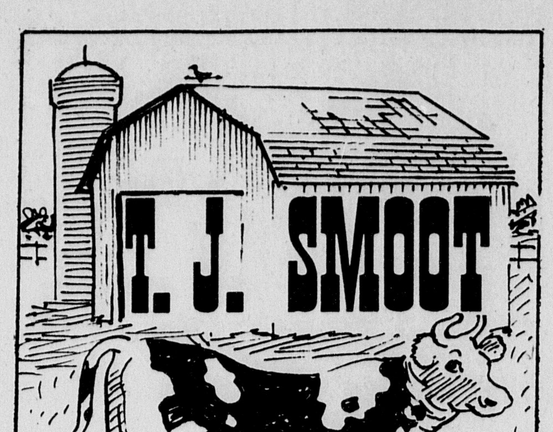

And if I felt racy, maybe a bumper sticker too.

I'm really a shy, reserved kinda guy. I like to blend in with the crowd, sit in the back of the church, go incognito. So it was a big deal when I decided to bite the bullet and broadcast to the world that I, Mr. Smoot, was in fact, yes siree, sure as tootin', going to be bold and plant a tiny plastic sign in my front yard for all to see. What would my neighbors think of me? Would they talk to me? Would they think that I had no sense? Would they let me borrow a cup of sugar?

Yet, because of my strong conviction, I called Mr. Drump's office for a yard sign.

"Hello," said the voice on the other side of the line.

"Ummm. Hi. Um, boy, I sure like Mr. Drump's politics, and I sure can't stand that opportunistic, constituent-abusive, religion-bashing incumbent, Mr. Beakbreath's position on, well...just about everything."

"Yes?" Was her cautious reply.

"Well, you see, just between you and me, I really like what Mr. Drump stands for, and I can't say enough good about his views." I began to get nervous and self conscious, thinking my jubilant gushing might lead her to think I was a Connie Chung reporter attempting to pry secret information out of her.

"Hmmm. Thank you."

"Well, see, I would like...a...yard sign."

"Oh."

"...and a bumper sticker too."

"Oh, great. Call your local office at 371-XXXX (not the real number). They should be able to help you." She also gave me the address.

"Great! You can count on MY vote! Hello? Hello?"

Well, I was jazzed now. I had all I needed to get my political statement ready for the world to see. I was convinced that once I had my yardsign and bumper sticker, the world would come to its senses and vote correctly...like me.

I found the headquarters around 12:45 pm, and after pulling into the lot and parking, I cautiously walked up to the door and tried the knob. Locked. I tried it again. Still locked. A shy knock. Nothing. It sure seemed that being politically active was a lot harder than I thought. I walked back to my car. Along the way, I noticed a woman in worn jeans walking up to the door I had just left. By this time I had sat down and was almost ready to leave when she jogged up to my car, smiling comfortably."Hi! Are you trying to get in there?"

"Uh, yes."

"My name is Frieda. Looks like they're out to lunch. I'm one of his supporters. Are you looking for some. . .um . . . information?"

"Yes. I'd like a yard sign and a bumper sticker." By this time, she was leaning over near my open window, smiling real big. She said. "If I can get your name and telephone number, I'll make sure you get one." I obliged, but began to feel awkward about how this situation was beginning to appear to onlookers. I looked around her and saw a faded Oldsmobile with a large shadow of a man in the passenger side, just waiting.

She offered, "This is kinda funny, doing this business out in the parking lot like this."

OK, NOW I WAS CONCERNED. I looked around nervously, half expecting to find a "Cops In West Sacramento" camera trained on my car door. I thought, "Is this a sting? I didn't do anything wrong! All I want is a yardsign...and a bumper sticker!" I gave her the info, adding it to a long list of other (hopefully legitimate) supporters and began to drive away.

"Oh, wait," she yelled, running back to her car, "here's a bumper sticker."

I snatched it from her hand, tossed it on the seat next to me and tried real hard NOT to peel out of the parking lot.

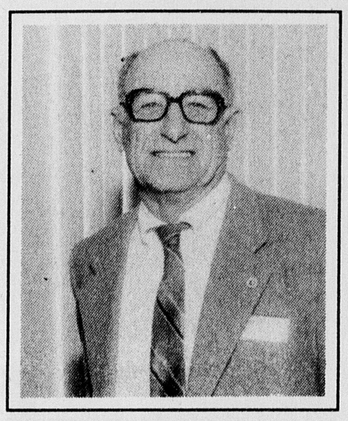

You know, I never did get that yardsign.

Obituaries

Stanley Raddigan

Stanley William Raddigan, a West Sacramento resident for 48 years who dedicated his life to the military and the Veterans of Foreign Wars, died Sunday, October 13. He was 77.

Mr. Raddigan had several small strokes in the past two years and one major stroke three weeks ago and died at the Greenhaven Country Place on Florin Road in Sacramento. Mr. Raddigan was a retired truck driver, working for Pacific Motor Trucking in Sacramento for 25 years. Mr. Raddigan volunteered his services at the McClellan Air Force Base Retirees Activity Office and the VFW Post 8762 in West Sacramento.

"I've been in the VFW since 1945 and have known a lot of people that have come and gone. In my opinion, Stan Raddigan was the greatest Service Officer alive and this is the truth," said Ray VanAlstyne, Quarter Master of VFW Post 8762 in West Sacramento and Sr. Vice Commander of the 17th District.

Stan Raddigan began his military career when he was 18 , joining the Army in October 1937. He was in the Army until 1941. From there, he enlisted in the Navy, where he began his foreign service in the Pacific and was on a submarine and later changed to a subtender, working as a Gunner's Mate until the end of WW II. The Navy called Raddigan back to active duty in the Korean War. Later he was in the Navy Reserve Corps and in May 1954 he entered the Marine Corps Reserve and retired in May 1974.

In 1982, Mr. Raddigan volunteered his services as an information officer for 14 years at McClellan AFB Retirees Activity Office, assisting retirees with their benefits.

Raddigan met Dorothy Martin ("Aunt Dot") in Perth, Western Australia, during WW II. The two were married there on March 18, 1944, where they lived for two and one-half years and had a baby girl, Karen. Raddigan belonged to the Masons Lodge, Robbie Burns, in Perth. He was one of the last Americans to close the Navy base in Fremantle, Western Australia, in February 1946. After the war, he brought his family to California, where they lived in Woodland for a few years and then settled in West Sacramento for over 40 years.

In 1982, Mr. and Mrs. Raddigan and their daughter, Karen, visited Western Australia where he revisited some of the sites from his WW II days.

Daughter Karen Lares remembers helping her father in the 1950s, setting up chairs and taking them down for the Saturday free childrens' movies, which were shown at the West Sacramento VFW. "My father would go to McCurry's Camera Shop and get the movies which often were cowboy movies or cartoons to show to the kids. He started this program, which was very successful."

Raddigan was the past Commander at the VFW Post 8762 from 1958-69 and 1973-74. He joined the Post in 1950 and remained a member in good standing ever since. During 1996, he became a Life Member of the VFW. "He was a very dedicated man to all veterans and was their service officer and representative to the Yolo County Veterans Coalition -- they take care of all Yolo County veterans affairs and burial arrangements at Monument Hill in Woodland. We are going to miss him very much. We all loved him. He was a dedicated family man and I never heard anybody say anything bad about him," said Hugh King of the West Sacramento VFW.

The Yolo County Veterans Coalition honored Mr. Raddigan in July, 1996 as Veteran of the Year in Yolo County in recognition of his "leadership and devotion, working and helping veterans and their families throughout the years."

Karen remembers her father talking to her cousins in helping them to decide which branch of the service they wanted to enter. One nephew joined the National Guard, another joined the Army, another the Air Force, and two others, the Marines.

Raddigan is survived by his wife of 52 years, Dorothy; daughter Karen and son-in-law Manual Lares of Dixon; daughter Dayle Raddigan of Sacramento; grandson David Whiteside of Maxton, North Carolina; and granddaughter Julie Eck and her husband, Gary, of Truckee, California. Raddigan was preceded in death by his only brother, Louis Frederick Raddigan, six years ago.

Funeral arrangements were made with River Cities Funeral Chapel. A memorial service will be held Thursday, October 17, at 11:00 a.m. at the VFW Post 8762, 11th and Soule Streets, in West Sacramento. Burial will be at Monument Hill in Woodland.

Bears just can't seem to lose

By Rick Barrett
West Sacramento Junior Midget Bears

The West Sacramento Junior Midget Bears continued their unbeaten season in the California Youth Football League with a hard-fought 26-12 victory over the Rio Vista Raiders. Led by a tenacious offense that held the pass-happy Raiders to 6 completions in 22 attempts, the win sets up a showdown of unbeaten teams in this Saturday's game at River City High School against the Natomas Nighthawks.

Rob Washington led off the scoring for the Bears with a 3-yard blast behind lineman Damon Dosty and Jared Leisure, Quarterback Jonathan Barrett's pass to Washington for the P.A.T. gave the Bears an early 7-0 lead. The Raiders scored their only offensive touchdown of the game on their next series to close the gap to 7-6. Zeke Butcher's 65-yard return on the ensuing kickoff set up the Bears' next score, a 25-yard touchdown pass from Barrett to Washington. Washington ran in the P.A.T. and the Bears led 14-6 at the half.

The Bears came out snarling in the second half as Kevin Haley broke free for a 77-yard touchdown jaunt on their opening drive. After Jacob Gonzales blocked a punt, the Bears put the game out of reach to lead 26-6 on a beautiful cutback run of 40 yards by Butcher.

Behind what coach Brian Castro called a "dominating offensive line" led by Robert Rodriguez and Sean Young, the Bears amassed 265 yards on the ground. Top rushers included Haley with 90 yards on 6 carries, Butcher with 70 yards on 6 rushes and Lorenzo Castanon for 65 yards on 2 handoffs. Washington had a fine all-around effort, scoring two touchdowns and two P.A.T.s, catching three passes for 40 yards and intercepting a pass on defense.

Defensive standouts included Haley with 7 tackles and 2 quarterback sacks, and Butcher with 5 tackles. They combined with Oscar Gaeta, Matthew Baker, Chris Holman and Washington to come up with big plays throughout the game.

The Bears go for their seventh win in as many games in Saturday's matchup of unbeaten teams, game time set for 1 p.m. Please contact league president Kevin Copelin at 371-6688 for any information.

Another frosh football shutout

By Chuck Robinson

The River City High School freshman football team beat Yuba City 34 to 0.

River City dominated the game right from the start. In the first quarter with 5:26 left on a quarterback keeper, Brooks Marino scored on a 10-yard run and Andrew Hoekstra kicked the conversion to lead, 7 to 0. On the next possession with 4:43 left, Robert Cervantes broke loose for a 35-yard touchdown and Hoekstra kicked to lead, 14 to 0. With 1:51 left, Malfred Shaw broke tackles and scampered 58 yards for a touchdown and Hoekstra kicked to lead, 21 to 0. River City scored again in the second quarter on a 16-yard run by Marshaun Tate, and Hoekstra kicked to lead at halftime, 28 to 0. The last score was in the third quarter, on a pass from Clay Harrell to Rich Cardenas, for a 55-yard touchdown and Hoekstra's kick was no good, to win, 34 to 0.

Offense was led by Shaw, with 8 carries for 114 yards; Cervantes, 54 yards; Eric King, 26 yards; Tate, 16 yards; Cardenas, 11 yards; and Marino, 10 yards.

Defense was led by Isrieal Luera, with 5 tackles and 6 assists; Marc Young, 2 tackles and 8 assists; King, 4 tackles, 1 assist and 1 quarterback sack; Cervantes, 4 tackles, 2 assists and 2 K.D.P.s; and Cardenas, 2 tackles, 4 assists and 2 K.D.P.s.

The coaches would like to mention the fellows that are responsible for all of this success (they call them the "Big Uglies"): Joe Castro, Mario Santos, Marc Young, Jacob Brown, Izzy Luera, Andrew Hoekstra, Josh Pruitt, Ron Cooper, Prak Pich, John Goeden, Tony Hernandez, David Saldana, Vincent Marquez, Rich Cardenas, David Novinger, Clay Harrell, Mike Dick, Nathan Carter, Alex Neverov, Raj Kumar, David Bugriyev, Chris Fallon, Mo Salmon, Rick Lytle, and Eugene Bugriyev.

"The good news is that we finished the first half of the season undefeated, untied and unscored upon," said head coach Chris Baker. "The bad news is that now we have to play them all over again. I hope that we're equal to the challenge."

This Thursday, the Raiders will travel to Marysville. Game time is 6 p.m.

The Sports Insider

By Richard Novoa

The 49ers returned from Green Bay claiming the officials stole the game from them, but in reality the 49ers coaches made a few wrong decisions that contributed to the 23-20 overtime loss. The 49ers defensive kept Brett Farve and the high scoring Packers offensive to five field goals and a questionable 64 yard touchdown pass to Don Beebe.

The 49ers lost the game in overtime on a Chris Jacke 53 yard field goal, but the game was lost in the final two minutes of the game when the 49ers intercepted a pass and returned it to the Packers ten yard line and the coaching staff decided to go for a field goal. The 49ers should have at least tried a couple of passes to the end zone to score a touchdown!

The 49ers held the ball for 23 seconds, running two plays, and then had Elvis Grbac fall down in the middle of the field to set up a Wilkins 28 yard field goal to win the game, right! ?

Wrong. The 49ers gave last year's MVP Brett Farve the ball with 1:42 left to play and one time out. The rest of the story is history.

Next week, the 49ers (4-2) host the (1-5) Cincinatti Bengals at 3 Com Park at 1 p.m. The 49ers are still going to be mad.

49ers 45, Bengals 10.

The Raiders won two games in a row! Two in a row!! The Raiders defense stopped Barry Sanders and put a lot of pressure on Lions QB early in the game and built a 34-0 lead before the Lions came roaring back with 21 unanswered points. The Raiders hung on to win 37-21 as Jeff Hostetler produced one of his best plays at QB, completing 28-37 passes for 295 yards with no interceptions and four touchdowns.

Oakland travels to San Diego for Monday night football as 3 1/2 point underdogs. The Chargers had a bye last week and should be prepared for their arch rival Raiders.

Chargers 27, Oakland 24.

The Yankees beat up the Orioles in their best of seven series and the World Series returns to Yankee Stadium for the first time since 1981. The MVP of the series, center fielder Bernie Williams, hit .474 (9-19) with two homers and six RBI. Williams is one of the game's best young players, and I look for him to lead the Yankees to the World Championships against the winner of the Braves-Cardinals seires, which at press time had the Cards ahead 3 games to 2.

The Sacramento Kings (1-1) won their first pre-season game last Sunday, beating the Portland Trailbrazers 103-97. The Kings play host to the Detroit Pistons on Thursday at 7:30 p.m. at the Arco Arena.

See ya next week!!

OPINION

News-Ledger Editorial

Parking, traffic & stuff

Time out for a parking pet peeve.

The curb in front of Hollywood Hardware, near the eastern driveway in its parking lot (a lot shared with the post office on Merkley Ave.), needs to be a no-parking zone. Too often, someone whose vehicle is too big to get easily in and out of that congested parking lot parks along this curb, obstructing the view of drivers trying to exit the lot.

To see if traffic is coming from the east, drivers have to nose their cars out of the lot onto the street. In order to see around these parked vehicles, they must pull out far enough to be hit from the other side.

Speaking of traffic --

What looked like a serious traffic accident shut down part of the eastbound Capitol City (formerly Business 80) Freeway yesterday near where I-80 splits for Reno.

The cause is not immediately known here. But anybody coming into West Sacramento from the west is familiar with the inevitible last minute multi-lane changing that goes on there, with cars whipping across the freeway from left lane to right lane, as mountain-bound travellers belatedly realize they are on the wrong freeway and need to get to I-80 headed for Reno.

Is there some way of warning folks of this freeway split a little earlier or more prominently?

Until recently, the News-Ledger was proud to be the only target of public mudslinging in Local Election '96, as a letter writer enthusiastically took the newspaper to task for daring to disagree with his candidate on an issue his candidate brought up for discussion.

That distinction is now in doubt.

As the election date closes, let's try to keep things civil, folks.

MELVIN WALL AND 25 OTHER SIGNATURES
West Sacramento

From Vince

For those of you wondering why I am so vigorously supporting Mark Montemayor, Jim Cahill, Bill Kristoff and Charles Moore in the upcoming election on November 5, and why I am seeking to retire Greg Potnick and Cindy Tuttle, the reasons are below:

1. Rearrange zoning: The decision on May 10, 1995, to rearrange the zoning of commercial properties that have existed since the 1970s, in spite of the protest of myself and other affected owners, has not only a derogatory effect on the value of our properties. It has, in my case, stopped my planned intent to personally develop commercially the property.

My partners and I have owned the property between Gregory Ave. and Jefferson Blvd. for a long time. It comprises 13 1/2 acres and has been commercial since before we become a city and is ideal for commercial purposes. It has been capriciously changed to 2 1/2 acre house lots which are not nearly as valuable. This is a financial loss to me and the other owners with down zone properties. However, the people of Southport also lose. They lose a very desirable location for commercial services. This 13 1/2 acres is bordered by three important roads: Jefferson Blvd., Gregory Ave., and Davis Road. It is deep into Southport where a commercial development will greatly reduce the necessity to drive long distances, or go to many different locations.

2. Old time West Sac citizens -- Who cares?: Thinking that there would be a future for normal housing in Southport, I purchased with my partners 19 1/2 acre lots at Davis and Partridge Road. Half acre lots are a good size, around 100 X 220. The three council majority, who seem to feel that it is their destiny to rule the town, and that nothing has a right to exist without their imprimatur, saw fit to change what has existed for a long time and is satisfactory to the owners. Here is what they have changed our property to: three (3) 1 acre lots, and to crown their unreasonableness, two (2) 2 1/2 acre lots, 60 feet and 813 deep. Who is interested in buying such monstrosities? The properties will be worth far less than 1/2 its original value.

My neighbor, Mr. Meyers, who has 5 acres across the street from our lots, has attended all the meetings and has owned his property for 48 years. Beers, Tuttle and Potnick, who are running the town like alligators running a swamp, did not give that old man, trying to protect his investment, the time of day, certainly no respect. They simply trashed his dreams and made a swamp out of his property.

3. Elected officials must listen to its citizens -- they listen but they do not hear: The city council calls public meetings and public hearings for public input. But the good citizens of West Sacramento are just pawns in this game. I came to the United States, like many of your parents and grandparents, with 15 cents and a loaf of bread. I never had to beg. But when I went to the city council meeting about my property down zoning, I begged them to just leave my property alone. I learned I do not like begging. I feel like I am less a man when I have to beg. I also learned a lot about public input. Tom Jules, Tom Carpenter, Lou Arges, Mr. Meyers, Irene Eklund, Pat Flint, the nice lady in the wheel chair, Bob Mahalison, William Lowell, and many others spoke to the city council. They listened, but they did not hear. The meetings are only held to make what they do legal. The three person majority listen but are too smart to hear. They are at the top of the ladder and are stepping on the fingers of the good citizens of West Sacramento. The council majority thinks we are a bunch of dumb sheep. Sheep get sheared once a year; the citizens of West Sacramento get sheared at every meeting of the city council.

These are some of the reasons I would like to see Greg Potnick and Cindy Tuttle retired. I hope you understand more clearly now. I do not want Greg Potnick and Cindy Tuttle to have the power to rearrange anymore of my property or yours. Don't be fooled into thinking that it can't happen to you. I urge you to vote for Mark Montemayor, Bill Kristoff, Jim Cahill, and Charles Moore on November 5. If you do, this will eliminate many of the problems our little city is now facing.

VINCE FRUGOLI
West Sacramento

Answering Vince

Mr. Vince Frugoli says he is a victim of the city council. He admits to spending considerable money ($5000 is considerable in our little town) on his private campaign to defeat two current council members up for re-election, because he didn't get his way. The members, Cindy Tuttle and Greg Potnick, were part of the majority vote that denied Mr. Frugoli's request to put a higher density housing on his rural parcels in the southern end of West Sacramento than the zoning plan allows.

Those of us who watch how each member of the city council votes, knows that Tuttle and Potnick consistently vote their conscience in response to the collective majority voice of our community. They truly are public servants. The fact is that the voices of the community during the public hearings for a plan for our town, wanted to preserve some of the pastoral character and charm of our city, that is swiftly disappearing in America. Tuttle and Potnick listened and voted accordingly. Unfortunately, Mr. Frugoli's interests aren't the same as the majority. Cramming houses on land is not exactly pastoral.

Even if we, ourselves, don't care about preserving our rural areas, what about the people currently in the rural areas, who thought they bought into the "country life." Won't they be Mr. Frugoli's victim if he gets his way? Ousting council members because they listened to the community and voted to preserve a bit of way of life in America doesn't make sense.

Regardless of zoning, Mr. Frugoli stand to make considerable money from his land speculations. It is hard to feel sorry for him when many of us in West Sacramento can't even afford to own our own home. It is also hard to think of him as a victim just because he isn't getting as big a piece of the pie as he wants. Most of us would be grateful for just a spoonful of what is on his plate.

More on Vince

A comment on the News-Ledger's report on the Frugoli slate which appeared on 10/8/96:

Thank you for calling attention to the effort being made by one disgruntled property owner to throw out a good, responsible, hard-working team from our city council. It may be that Mr. Frugoli (who makes excellent spaghetti) doesn't like what happened with his property in the long process to make sense out of the zoning in Southport, but the process was open and could have been made the subject of appeal. If each of us were to vote on a single planning issue, what chaos we would have!

Unfortunately, this slate has been linked to the grievances of others about widening Jefferson Blvd. -- if all those homes Frugoli wanted to build were built, then those who live on Jefferson would find themselves living on a narrow, traffic-clogged street.

The Frugoli slate candidates represent a potential shift towards special interests, however well-intentioned its maker is.

Plan for permanence!

Plan NOW!

It is probably not a good reason to run for office but it is one of my major reasons for running. In fact, two of my reasons are inter-related. The main one is, I am tired of hearing two terms that are used so frequently by our city council members and the department personnel. These terms are "temporary" and "West Sacramento and Southport," when they are discussing programs and progress in our young city. Truthfully, I don't believe they are even aware of how often they use these terms, or expressions.

Let's first talk about the term "temporary." When we become a city I was able to accept that expression, because I knew it would take a while for our council members and staff to learn to work on all the problems that caused us to decide to become a city. When people tell me they don't see any improvements, I am one of the first to remind them that many things, like replaced water and sewer pipes, which while not visible have been completed in some areas. That same principal applies to creating a city council, where there was none before. It also applies to inexperienced council members hiring a staff, with experience, to be able to advise the council on the future of our city. So, for a "temporary" time, things had to be done quickly even if not permanently. That time has past and the council must recognize that fact. If I can recognize that, without the aid and advice of staff, then I expect the council to do likewise.

I don't want to hear that the new James McKnight Police Department building, which has cost us over $1,200,000.00, and taken over two years to re-build is "temporary" and will shortly not be large enough to meet future needs. I don't want to hear that the city hall, which we have just acquired and have just started to remodel is "temporary." And you can be sure that I, as the chairman of the West Sacramento Commission on Aging, do no want to hear about another "temporary" senior center. Particularly, I don't want to hear that this center will not have all the features the residents of other cities have come to expect in their senior centers.

I was able to accept that the arrangement, made with the Annual parade and hometown festival rapidly approaching

From the West Sacramento Chamber of Commerce

The 21st annual Community Day Parade and Hometown Festival for West Sacramento is set for Sunday, October 27, at 1 p.m. "Into the Future" is the theme this year, in keeping with the fact that the City of West Sacramento moves into its tenth year of existence and the West Sacramento Chamber of Commerce begins to celebrate its 50th birthday in 1997.

Produced by the City, the Chamber and the Washington Unified School District, the event begins with a parade at 1 p.m. down West Capital Avenue, from Walnut Avenue to Jefferson Blvd. It will end up at the shopping center at West Capitol and Jefferson Blvd. Bands, color guards, floats, dancers, horses, cars, drill teams, politicians and more will pass the reviewing stand, located at Raley's, and continue on to the Hometown Festival.

Community non-profit groups will gather at the hometown portion of the day and sell soda, food, candy and souvenirs and distribute vital information. Local businesses are also encouraged to hand out information about their business at the Hometown Festival. Participants must pre-register.

To register to be in the parade and/or the Hometown Festival or to obtain more information, call the West Sacramento Chamber of Commerce at 371-7042 or visit the office, located at 1414 Merkley Avenue, West Sacramento.

Yolo County Housing Authority (YCHA), to lease one building as a senior center, was advantageous to both parties in the contract. What I am not able to accept is that the two parties are not willing to accept the advice of seniors, or the commission members, regarding the problems created for seniors by this arrangement. Repetitious problems caused because neither of the parties affected is at fault.

For those who may not know what I am talking about, let me explain. It is simple, but it is not easy -- a fact one of the council members indicated to me just before I decided to run for office...

When a member of this community goes to our Senior Center it should certainly be clear that he or she will fully enjoy the wonderful programs Susan Roi and the other Parks Department employees keep introducing to them. They should, like people at other centers, be able to come there to laugh and talk with old and new friends about the activities and look forward to, perhaps, evening events. That is as it should be.

When a member of this community moves into an apartment in a senior complex it is a bit different then moving into most other apartments. There are both Federal and State laws in effect regarding this type of housing. For instance, this is one of the places that does not allow children as tenants. These apartments were granted money to enable the builders to supply housing to seniors, seniors and more seniors. When seniors move in they are informed that they must abide by the "no children rule."

Why? Because someone along the line of bureaucrats accepted the fact that older people frequently do not have the tolerance for children that younger people have. (The high activity-rate of children can be distressing.) Frequently, they are up all night. Frequently, they sleep a lot during the day. Frequently, they like the quieter life. When they want action they usually know where to go to enjoy it. Somewhere like the Senior Centers found in many other cities. That, also, is as it should be.

Of the people who work with and for seniors, few will deny that there are wide varieties of likes and needs among this age bracket. Within each of our families I am sure you will find that is true. Some are still working or are very active, others are not. Just because they have different lifestyles does not mean either is right or wrong, which we all should known from other things in life.

When the pattern of these life styles comes in conflict, particularly at the place where a Senior Complex and a Senior Center share space, no one is wrong but a problem still exists. After over three years of this, I expect the members of the council to pay more attention and show more respect. I have explained to many people that just because Juanita Lopes is the one to bring these problems to the proper people does not indicate she is a "crank." She is on the YCHA as a representative of seniors. To fulfill her obligations she makes reports. Unfortunately, like many other volunteers, she frequently wonders why there are such positions if no one pays any attention to the reports.

Our city does not have any facility that can handle large meetings or family events such as weddings or anniversaries. We must pay to use places in Sacramento. Those dollars could be better spent here. The fiasco regarding a graduation class (the last Golden State Middle School graduating class will be the class of 2000 from high school) is just one fine example of what I mean. This must not continue.

When our city was only a few years old, I asked the city council to immediately set aside land for city use as parks and for government buildings. If the land is not designated, plans cannot be made. I know we do not have the money, now, for the buildings we need. I also know, if we do not get the land NOW we will be unable to acquire large enough pieces later. I want our council to make this acquisition a priority. Sell or exchange what land we have for what we want and will need later. Then we can plan for our permanent operations. Later will be too late.

As to the other reasons, I will come back to them at another time. Then you can understand a bit better why I am running for West Sacramento's City Council.

DOROTHY B. ADAMO
Candidate for West Sacramento City Council

Pro Measure C

The following endorsement of Measure C by the Yolo County Taxpayers Association conveys very well the basic reasons for The Citizens putting the shallow mining alternative to deep pit mining on the ballot:

"The Yolo County Taxpayers Association endorses Measure C, the shallow mining proposal, on this November's ballot. Citizens crafted Measure C in response to the County's sweetheart deal to allow the gravel industry to create and abandon deep pits, some up to 150 feet into our water table.

The county proposal, Measure D, would unnecessarily open our drinking water to contamination and burden taxpayers with the long term liabilities the mining industry creates. In contrast, Measure C allows gravel mining above the water table, protecting our water quality and minimizing public liability.

We urge voters to carefully review both ballot measures and vote yes on Measure C. Free copies of each measure are available from the Elections Clerk, 625 Court Street, Room B05, Woodland, 95695, or telephone 666-8133."

The gravel miners and county attempt to make Measure D seem to be a benign environmental measure, when it is a deep-pit off-channel mining plan!

To this I would add that the voters deciding how to vote on Measure C -- the shallow mining plan -- and Measure D, the county/gravel companies' plan, by reading only the sample ballot and not seeing the full text of the measure, will not have a clue that the development agreements being readied with the gravel miners will permit deep pit off-channel mining.

Further, the campaign disclosure statements (partial, up to September 30) show that the gravel miners' support groups have raised $363,105, as compared to $4,430 (a ratio of 83:1) and have outspent the Citizens' group 100 to one.

Pursuing furniture mart

From Melinda Posner
Community Relations
Redevelopment & Housing Agency, West Sacramento

Ongoing efforts to encourage economic development continue to prove successful for the City of West Sacramento. The Redevelopment Agency was just awarded a $35,000 Planning and Technical Assistance grant from the Department of Housing and Community Development's (HCD) Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) program to determine the feasibility of a design center/furniture mart here in the City.

City staff intends to study the concept at Riverpoint, a 92-acre parcel located at Interstate 80 and Reed Avenue. The site is fully entitled for 700,000 square feet of retail development, with many of the public improvements, including streets and utilities, already in place.

The furniture mart concept involves clustering different types of furniture, home furnishings stores and related services on one site. They provide a single point of destination for customers to comparison shop among a wide variety of furniture types and suppliers and typically draw from a very large market area. The furniture mart concept would be a new one for the Sacrament region, however, other such furniture clusters exist around the country. The idea is similar to that of "big box" of "power

Pushing for Fazio:

West Sac Democrats open campaign office

From the West Sacramento Democratic Club

With red, white and blue in abundance, the West Sacramento Democratic Club inaugurated its Democratic coordinated campaign at 1510 Merkley Avenue, upstairs, on Sunday, October 13.

"We are proud to provide a one-stop resource for local voters interested in Democratic candidates and election activities," said Lisa Roberts, president. "We have information on candidates, signs, buttons and bumper stickers."

Many of those in attendance had just returned from an afternoon of door-to-door voter contact and lawn sign deliveries. "The heart and soul of the Democratic Party is at the grass-roots level," said club treasurer, Margaret Sturdevant. "As we were reminded at a recent meeting by our guest speaker Senator Dan Boatwright, Democratic registration is very high in our city, but voter turnout is critical," she stated. "We aim to make the difference for Congressman Vic Fazio and Supervisor Helen Thomson, candidate for State Assembly, by getting all our supporters to vote."

The headquarters will be open from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. through election day. Volunteers are invited to participate by stopping by or calling Saskia at 375-1367. A variety of tasks are available and students interested in learning about the election process are very welcome.

Local Democratic activists invite their fellow Democrats and other supporters of Democratic candidates to join them for a presidential debate party at the headquarters. The debate starts at 6 p.m. on Wednesday, October 16. Refreshments will be served. For details, call Saskia Kim at the headquarters at 375-1367.

Small claims court forms

The Yolo County Superior/Municipal Court system has announced an agreement with the county library system to make small claims court forms available at branch libraries.

The new program will promote public access to the courts, said a press release.

Davis, believes that promoting the port through such innovative sources as the International Herald Tribune newspaper or the CNN network on cable could pay off.

He also believes West Sacramento needs to re-think its redevelopment and economic development strategy.

"The redevelopment agency is run like a city real estate agency," Montemayor commented. "We buy properties and we sell properties. . . all the people know of redevelopment is its debacles, like the Vacation Inn and the El Rancho."

To succeed in really attracting commerce, said Montemayor, the city needs to make it easier for businesses to do business.

"One example of how we could enhance economic development is the permit process," Montemayor commented. "When we have a permit process where before you open a business, it gets bogged down in paperwork, that's money lost. If you bog people down when you open up a business, they will go somewhere else."

He favors a "one-stop" permit shop.

"Now, you still have to go to 1951 South River Road for your building permits and Stone Blvd. for your business license. You have to have one stop for all the agencies, with a fire department liaison in one room, an economic incentive officer in the next room, and so on."

Montemayor, 25, grew up in a rural neighborhood in West Sacramento's southern area and recently moved to Stone Blvd. He is unmarried and a UC Davis graduate.

He is an administrator for Mom's Senior Care Homes, a residential care facility in West Sacramento which he said tries hard to provide a "home" atmosphere for seniors who needs just a little assistance.

He sings in the church choir at Our Lady of Grace and holds leadership positions for the Filipino Political Action Coalition and Filipino Chamber of Commerce, his press material states.

Montemayor first became noticed in West Sacramento politics when he voiced his opposition to a city plan to build a new sewage plant near Jefferson and Davis roads in Southport, near his family's longtime home.

He gives other planning efforts by the city mixed marks.

"I believe the residential planning has been sub-par," Montemayor commented. "The concept of the Southport Framework Plan is good. The village concept is good, with open space and separate developments instead of having a giant Elk Grove."

"But the sewage plant (site controversy), the Jefferson Blvd. widening, the Harbor Blvd. widening, Lighthouse Marina -- these are all examples of the city using or threatening eminent domain," Montemayor commented.

Eminent domain is the principal by which the city can force the sale of private property is it determines that public ownership of the property is necessary for the greater good.

"When the city pays for land, you lose land from the tax rolls. That hurts. The Jefferson Blvd. plan hurts people in Holly-Maple and in Meadowdale. We need to make sure that when we need to acquire land, it's done as a last resort, and we use public land whenever possible."

On the other hand, he likes what he sees ready to happen on the city's riverfront.

"I think the Money Store project is good," Montemayor commented. "It makes the waterfront attractive to people on the other side of the river. We need to learn from places like San Antonio and Portland, promoting our riverfront, port, railways and freeways."

Although he gives mixed reviews to the city's current development strategy, Montemayor believes the basics of a good city are in place nearly ten years after incorporation.

"I believe the city council has done a very, very good job in establishing a city," he said. "They had to put a police department together, a fire department, sewer, water and waste management departments. We should nally shut down partly due to city action.

Moore is the president of Petroleum Tank Lines on Rice Avenue. His wife, Barbara, is an economic development officer for the city's redevelopment agency, and they live in the Park Blvd. neighborhood with son Michael, 12. A daughter, Melissa, attends CSU Sacramento.

Community activities include service as a soccer and little league coach, chairing the city inauguration event, and service as president of the local chamber of commerce.

He is excited about projects such as the Money Store headquarters now being built on the West Sacramento riverfront, and the Southport Framework Plan which includes plans for a multi-village community in the south.

"The concept of the Southport Framework Plan is just about perfect for what our town should look like 25 or 30 years from now," he said. "It has clusters of homes with little bits of commercial in them so people can buy the essentials without having to travel."

And the Money Store is just the precursor to a unique city waterfront, outlined in what the city has adopted as the "Triangle Specific Plan, covering the riverfront from the freeway to the Tower Bridge.

"The riverfront can't be compared to any other project in the state of California," he commented. "You're going to have businesses, homes, and an amphitheater for people to gather in."

One of the city council's duties is to keep watch over this imminent growth, said Moore, striving for "quality."

But Moore also hopes to make the local government more responsive to its citizens in day to day operations if he is elected.

"I would use the same philosophy in our city as I do in our business," he commented. "The city is a business, and the citizens are our customers, and when you use the normal business philosophy, the customer is always right. If they have questions and concerns, I think each department should be open to listening and trying to rectify them whenever possible.

"I sincerely believe we need to have just a little different attitude and teach everyone who deals with our public to treat the citizens like they would like to be treated."

Moore is not running as part of a "slate," he said, although resident Vince Frugoli is recommending a "yes" vote on Moore for the two-year seat as well as on Jim Cahill, Mark Montemayor and incumbent Bill Kristoff for the three four-year seats. Frugoli's highly visible campaign includes signs and other advertisements. Frugoli feels incumbents Potnick and Tuttle violated his rights by rezoning some of his property in Southport.

"I voted against his zoning (at the planning commission level)," said Moore. "But Vince is an old time friend. He's putting on a spaghetti feed for me."

Moore also commented on the campaign reform issue, raised by rival Christopher Cabaldon, who has asked all candidates to restrict donations to no more than $100 from any single source. A city ordinance currently sets the ceiling at $250.

"The city council has come up with political reform," Moore commented. "We're one of the few cities that has it. We've never had anybody come forward with this until election time. My feeling today is the city has made the necessary adjustment and it seems to be a relatively fair and ethical way of limiting the money coming into a campaign."

Moore hopes to continue the city's relationship with the local school district.

"At the level I know, which is the planning commission level, we've been constantly working with the schools on planning in general and Southport in particular, helping them to get their schools and make sure they were correctly placed. This city has to continue that kind of relationship."

He also hopes to continue working with the schools to make facilities serve dual city/schools purposes.

"We've been going into schools and helping them revitalize by putting in parks and baseball diamonds," he said. "These are things that can be used during the day by the school and afterwards by the community as parks."

Already well known for a non-incumbent, Moore is hoping to raise money to get his message out as well as to continue walking precincts and talking to voters.

"Whatever I can think of to do to make this campaign work and make my thoughts and views known to as many people as possible, I will do," Moore stated. "We're going door to door and putting lawn signs out. We're also going to try to put some kind of mailer out. Everything is very expensive."

Like some of the other candidates, Moore sees West Sacramento's role in the region as topic of major importance.

"The two prime issues I see in this city are regionalism as a key element to growth in our city and the fact we need a lot more emphasis on the positive things going on the community," he related.

"Every single day since we've been a city and taken control of our own destination, we've seen nothing but improvement. Look at the water plant, the riverfront construction, the Palamidessi Bridge. Every one of these has been a positive thing for the city, along with street sweeping and more police officers."

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF ROSALIE L. WILLIAMS
CASE NUMBER P96000198

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both, of ROSALIE L. WILLIAMS:

A PETITION has been filed by KENNETH S. FITZGERALD in the Superior Court of California, County of Yolo.

THE PETITION requests that KENNETH S. FITZGERALD be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

THE PETITION requests the decedent's WILL and codicils, if any, be admitted to probate. The will and any codicils are available for examination in the file kept by the court.

THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested parties unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

A HEARING on the petition will be held on 10-25-96 at 9:00 a.m. in Dept. 4, Room 200, located at 725 Court Street, Woodland, CA 95695.

IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the deceased, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within four months from the date of first issuance of letters as provided in section 9100 of the California Probate Code. The time for filing claims will not expire before four months from the hearing date noticed above.

YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a formal Request for Special Notice of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in section 1250 of the California Probate Code. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.

would be affected as the street was widened from two lanes to six suddenly seemed to learn of the impending design change, and complained loudly.

"The jury's still out" as to whether the street needs to be six lanes, said Cabaldon. "But they way it was handled hasn't been appropriately sensitive to the community. These are people who bought their properties in good faith."

Cabaldon added that although all of the hearings discussing the six-lane proposal may have been open and above board, not enough outreach was made to those affected.

"(The city) has a tendency to think everybody has the same familiarity with these documents," he commented. "But most West Sacramento residents don't have a copy of the Southport Framework Plan in their bathroom. We have to tell them in advance. Trying to sneak this by as a technicality was a big mistake."

Cabaldon, who is unmarried, bought a home in West Sacramento almost four years ago, and unsuccessfully ran for city council in 1994.

"I had to make a decision about living here," he said about his move to West Sacramento. "I don't want to lose the things that brought me here. Most people in my neighborhood know each other. We're not a '60s sitcom where we all hang out all afternoon, but we know each other and exchange Christmas gifts."

"There's a lot to build on in the existing neighborhoods," Cabaldon continued. "We have some neighborhoods that have some cohesiveness and some history."

Cabaldon agrees with the prevailing view among the candidates that, after a lengthy recession and a number of local planning efforts, the city is ready to grow.

"We're poised and ready for a lot of development, whether that's good or bad," he commented. "To a large extent, that's a good thing, as long as we approach it correctly. It's really important, after ten years of waiting and planning, to lose control when it finally comes."

Partly to avoid undue influence during this decision-making time, Cabaldon has proposed new, lower limits on city council campaign donations. A city ordinance currently limits individual donations to $250, and Cabaldon said he has voluntarily restricted his own campaign donations to no more than $100.

As a aide for a Los Angeles assemblywoman Marguerite Archie-Hudson, Cabaldon said his work in the capital has made him very sensitive to the effect money can have on an official's judgment.

"I see good people get caught up in a corrupt system," he said, speaking on state politics in general. "Mostly, it doesn't come from people who say, 'If you give me a thousand bucks, I'll vote this way.' It comes from getting a large sum of money for your campaign, and then you pay more attention to them. It's just human nature."

Cabaldon's challenge to other council candidates to similarly limit their donations has been largely ignored, with these candidates supporting the existing $250 limit instead.

"That means I have to work two and a half times harder to raise money," he commented.

The candidate sees some encouraging things in the city's current performance.

"I don't have a deep philosophical difference with the current council," he commented. "I just think they've gotten a little bit comfortable.

"The area we've had the greatest need for improvement is code enforcement," he said. And the recent doubling of that department's staff from two to four people, as well as its impending move to the new police department building, is a good step, he added.

"That unit has not been a high performance unit. We haven't targeted the worst blight, and if you just sort of enforce things on a random basis, it looks like people have been targeted. As I knock on doors (campaigning), it is a widely held belief that the code enforcement unit is a weapon for targeting certain people. Whether that's true or not, I can't say."

He singled out the city parks department as doing "an outstanding job, given the financial constraints," and stressed that the public safety units -- the police and fire departments -- should remain a city budget priority.

Cabaldon believes the city's relationship with its school district is generally positive.

"But I think we can take that a step further and be an aggressive advocate for the schools," he added. "For instance, when Sonic Cable's contract comes up, we should hold their feet to the fire" and get them to wire school computers to the internet.

"You can do it with cable lines," he said. "The city can leverage something there that would be very beneficial."

Also on the agenda is carefully watching the finances of allowing new housing construction.

"When new development comes in, you have to make sure it pays its fair share for the schools," said Cabaldon.

Although he works with state legislators, Cabaldon said he has no ambitions for such a post himself.

"Anybody who has any interest in running for legislative or higher office should just go work there a couple of years," he joked. "Any interest you have in it will go away."

Cabaldon has served on the Yolo County Health Commission since 1993, and served for a year and a half on the county transportation committee.

recognize all this was done."

Now is the time to usher in the next phase, he added.

"We're at a stage now where we're starting to mature in the building process of our city. We should focus on how people want their city to be as far as residential. It's time to ask people -- to actually bang on their doors and ask them -- how do you want your city to be? Should we go with more industrial, more commercial, more residential?"

That "banging on doors" philosophy is also part of what Montemayor regards as essential to staying in touch with the public. He regards his own precinct walking as an opportunity for residents to give him a "job interview" for a role as their councilman.

"I've worn out three pairs of shoes walking," he said. "I also expect to raise a lot of money for this campaign. You have to put out the signs and the mailers just to be competitive, and fundraising has to pay the bills."

Since candidates are allowed to use unlimited amounts of their own money in a campaign, Montemayor (who minored in political science in college) said he does not favor lowering contribution limits from others to below the current $250 per donor allowed in city council races.

If you lower the $250 ceiling, that's going to help the Ross Perots and Michael Huffingtons, who can afford to pay for their own campaigns," he said.

A poorer candidate is going to have a hard time keeping up with them while sticking to the $100 contribution limit.

Montemayor does not favor an overall cap on campaign spending.

"If you limit the amount a person can spend, you limit people's freedom of expressing themselves politically, and how they run their campaigns. I believe you're going against the integrity of what political campaigns are all about."

Montemayor sees the city's relationships with the schools as important, politically in school site planning and in handling school traffic congestion.

"The city has to address the traffic problems that come with schools," he stated. "They did a good job with the new Southport Elementary School site on Linden Road, because that's a road that can handle the traffic. We've got to make sure they're on arteries and major roads. Kegle is not a very safe place around 8 a.m. (due to school traffic) and Alyce Norman is the same way on Anna St., and Meadow Road (near the high school) is a disaster when school's out."

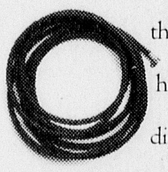

Although promoted by landowner Vincent Frugoli on a slate with Jim Cahill, Montemayor said that although he works with Frugoli, he is running independently from other candidates.

"I wasn't actively soliciting his support," Montemayor said. "I listened to him. The act of listening to somebody is itself a form of leadership."

"We should have five independent jurists as council members, and not slates," he continued. "They should not have some kind of debate behind closed doors, but should have an honest to goodness debate in public."

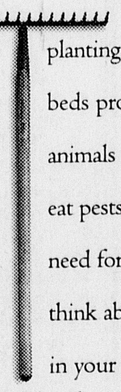

WHY ORGANIC GARDENING ISN'T JUST A BUNCH OF MANURE.

Organic gardening is a lot more than natural fertilizer. And organic gardens do a lot more than make your yard look pretty. They help make the environment healthier. So let's dig in and see how you can help.

To conserve water, use soaker hoses instead of sprinklers.

The first step to creating an environmentally friendly garden is to compost. Composting not only helps produce the bacteria, nutrients and mulch plants need, it also reduces the amount of solid waste your home creates. Another easy way to help the environment in your garden is to change the tools you use. For instance, instead of using sprinklers, try using soaker hoses. They leak moisture into the soil at slow rates, so water gets absorbed instead of running off. You may also consider using a rake, instead of gas-powered blowers.

Use a rake instead of gas-powered blowers.

Rakes use no fuel and give you some exercise. Next, think about the types of plants you plant. Consider planting perennials. Perennial beds provide refuge for animals and insects that will eat pests and reduce your need for chemicals. Finally, think about planting a tree in your backyard. Trees keep harmful carbon dioxide from entering the atmosphere and create lots of energy-saving shade.

So you see, when we say organic gardens are a good idea, it's no bull.

For more tips or information on how you can help, write Earth Share, 3400 International Drive NW, Suite 2K (AD1), Washington, D.C. 20008.

Over 15% of solid waste could be reduced if everyone who gardens composted.

Southport plan leaves some unhappy

Landowner Lou Arges fears he will lose some rights

By David Weller

Southport landowner Lou Arges threatened Wednesday night to take the city to court if it does not make concessions in the rezoning of some of his Southport property.

Showing the council members a 1972 subdivision map, Arges said that both he and Vince Frugoli have for a long time planned to divide the properties into half acre lots and build houses for their children. Frugoli owns land adjacent to Arges" on Davis Road west of the railroad tracks.

When Arges bought his property in 1972, the county had the entire area zoned for half acre parcels. The newly passed Southport framework plan rezones the properties on and around Davis Road for two and a half acre lots.

> "It makes me sad that you spend your whole lives out there and someone comes along and marks you off with a pencil."
> -- Lou Arges

The subdivision Arges built in the early 1970s consists of five houses ranging in size from less than half an acre to three quarters of an acre.

While the lots with houses already built on them will not be affected by the rezoning, Arges is concerned about a four and a half acre lot he still owns behind the small subdivision.

According to Arges, his agreement with the county allowed that he would be allowed to subdivide the four and a half acres when services became available to area. "When water and sewer became available we were to be able to build more houses," he said.

Arges believes that by rezoning his vacant lot, the city has effectively lowered the value of the property. The lot that could have potentially held up to nine houses on half acre parcels, will now be zoned for only one. "How can you divide four and a half acres into two, 2 and a half acre lots?" he asked.

"I don't know who in the hell is going to build a big house on a two and a half acre parcel when it is surrounded by half acre parcels," he said.

"It makes me sad that you spend your whole lives out here and someone comes along and marks you off with a pencil," he added.

Mayor Cindy Tuttle in a phone interview that in considering the framework plan, "it is important to stay focused on the big picture. What's best for the overall good of the area and the people in the area. If we start spot zoning, it defeats the purpose of the framework plan."

"We can't be driven by fear of lawsuits," she continued.

Tuttle said that Arges' map is valid, but that the framework plan does not change the map.

"The map he showed me shows lots along Davis Road as they currently exist, and a 4 and a half acre parcel behind," she said.

City pursues design review authority

Commission will be in charge of approving look, shape & color

A public workshop will be held Thursday evening to explore the process of forming a city design review commission. The commission, called for by several geographical area plans already approved by the city, would pass judgment on design elements such as colors, exterior treatments, shapes and masses of proposed new buildings.

The hearing will be held by the West Sacramento Planning Commission, which meets at city hall (2101 Stone Blvd.) beginning at 6:00 p.m. on Thursday.

City staff will present the planning commission with various options on forming the new design committee.

The staff will ask the commission to consider whether it wants "a micro-review process to achieve quality development" or simply "a few well thought out policies." It will also ask the commission to consider whether the new design review commission should be made up purely of residents, or should include mostly members of the business community or some other makeup.

Participation on the new commission could be on a paid or a volunteer basis, or the commission's duties could simply be handled by the existing planning commission.

The planning commission's comments will be used by staff to draft a policy for the creation of the new design review commission.

Specific area plans for West Sacramento's downtown waterfront, Southport and Washington (Broderick) areas all call for the use of a future design review commission.

The concept is intended to promote architectural unity and guarantee against "bad" design, said the staff report, but critics say such commissions can consume both project time and money and can discourage creativity while ensuring mediocrity.

West Sacramento Chamber announces stand on county gravel mining issue

The West Sacramento Chamber of Commerce has announced it has made a recommendation in the Yolo County gravel mining ballot measures scheduled for a vote this November.

The chamber has chosen to oppose Measure C, which was written by citizens groups and environmentalists, and to support Measure D, which was authored by the county board of supervisors and is supported by gravel miners' interests who oppose Measure C.

The chamber states that Measure C "would put unfair restrictions on the gravel mining industry to the point that it could well be shut down which would cause the loss of jobs in the county as well as the loss of an opportunity to reclaim land that has been damaged from the effects of past gravel mining," according to a chamber press release.

"Measure D, on the other hand, is the result of hard negotiating by the Yolo County Board of Supervisors, and is one of the most comprehensive such agreements in California," said the press release.

The issue concerns gravel mining and its effect on Cache Creek and Yolo County groundwater.

History folks meet

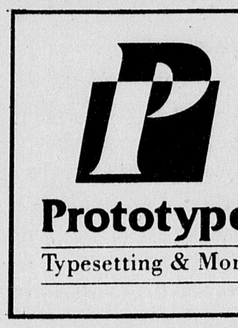

From Louisa R. Vessell
West Sacramento Historical Society

The West Sacramento Historical Society will meet Tuesday, October 22, at 6:30 p.m. at the Arthur F. Turner Library, 1212 Merkley Avenue, West Sacramento.

Chris Lauren of Country Trade Connections in Roseville will discuss "Golden Khokhloma," Russian folk art. This unique decorative wood art form dates back over three centuries. The pieces are created in order to gild without the use of gold and has remained unchanged over 300 years. Khokhloma artists never paint an exact copy of one design or patterns making each piece unique. The items are utilitarian and can be used in one's daily life. Mr. Lauren is the exclusive United States representative for Golden Khokhloma.

The society is sponsoring a steak and chicken dinner fundraiser to generate funds for the restoration of the two historic fire engines ("Old Mary" and "The Wine Barrel") that the City of West Sacramento donated to them. The dinner will take place on Saturday, October 26, at the VFW Hall, located at 11th and Soule Street, West Sacramento, from 6 to 10 p.m. Tickets for the event are $20 per person or one may make a donation to the society for the restoration of the vehicles by sending a check to the West Sacramento Historical Society, P.O. Box 65, West Sacramento, 95605. Contact Jeri-Hughes Wingfield at 371-7678 to order tickets.

For further information, contact either Bryan Turner at 371-6915 or Louisa R. Vessell at 451-5749.

center" retail centers, where several retailers benefit from shared advertising and expenses while attracting many potential customers to one location.

The Riverpoint site was identified as an excellent location for such a center based on its prime access, size of site and geographic location within the Sacramento region.

The Redevelopment Agency plans to hire a consultant to complete the study and expects the results before the end of the year.

stand on a western Yolo gravel mining controversy that has angered some citizens groups and environmentalists.

"All the easy decisions get made before they get to the board of supervisors," Stallard said, defending his record. "I hardly think anything I've done, whether you agree with it or not, warrants this kind of response. The general election is the time to vote people out, except in extreme circumstances."

Stallard estimates that Sieferman needs to obtain about 2,700 signatures to qualify the recall for a special election. The election would cost the county about $35,000, he added.

A resident is only able to file a recall attempt against a supervisor in his own district.

For that reason, Sieferman can only target Stallard for removal from office.
